One Way Out.

Perkins had been appointed tutor to the young lord of the manor, and together they were making the grand tour. Perkins was congratulating himself on the excellent behavior of his pupil; but, alas, they had only reached Geneva when his charge fell deeply in love with a pretty Swiss peasant. In vain did he remonstrate with the young lord, pointing out the social barrier that existed between the lovers and the total impossibility of marriage. But all to no purpose. The beautiful Swiss maiden held the young lord's heart captive, and he would scarcely leave her side.

Distracted, Perkins wrote home to the marchioness asking her advice and pointing out her son's infatuation.

A day or two passed in agonizing suspense.

At last the answer came. Perkins breathed a sigh of relief. All his anxiety would now be over. He tore open the envelope, but as he read the letter he groaned in the anguish of his soul. It consisted of three words:

"Marry her yourself."

Poor Bijou!

During the siege of Paris, Franciscque Sarcey indignantly protested against the practice of eating dogs. Hunger, however, knows no law, and canine and feline butcher shops were opened in different parts of Paris. Skillfully prepared, properly skinned and cooked, with a good sauce, the dogs proved excellent eating. Their meat was pink and delicate and by no means tough. Canine cutlets were sold at 2 francs each, and a leg of dog might be purchased at double that price a pound.

Two good bourgeois, husband and wife, had a little dog of which they were very fond. But a day came when there was nothing to eat in the house, and poor Bijou had to be killed and cooked. His master and mistress sat down to dinner with tears in their eyes, and during the dinner the latter mechanically placed the tiny rib bones on the side of her plate. "Poor Bijou!" she ejaculated with a sigh. "What a treat these would have been for him!"—Frank Schlosser in Contemporary Review.

A Tearful Eye to Business.

Advertising is nowadays almost a fine art. Clever advertisements attract customers in two ways—first, because they effectually call attention to the goods, and, second, because of their cleverness, pure and simple. Such a one is the following, quoted from London M. A. P., which adorned a boot shop in the Rue d'Amsterdam, in Paris:

LIQUIDATION.

With tears in my eyes, I am obliged to clear the whole of my stock of boots.

To get rid of it all in a week I offer it to you at a loss of 50 per cent.

My husband seeing fit to abandon me with five children.

WHY

Can't I go on without my husband? Because my husband alone was able to obtain job lines from the big provincial and foreign bootmakers.

Prudent ladies will profit by these extraordinarily low prices, which will enable me to clear out my stock and search for my husband throughout Europe.

MME. MARIE-LOUISE X.

Nothing to Say.

According to a delightful story of Shelley, recounted in the International Journal of Ethics by the Rev. Bradley Gilman, the splendid mental equipment of the poet did not include humor. In his characteristically impassioned way, Shelley was deeply interested in the problem of immortality. One day he met a nursemaid wheeling a very young child in a perambulator.

"Here is a little soul," he reflected, "recently come to earth out of the great unknown preceding human life. Perhaps he can tell me something about the great unknown after human life. The two realms may be one and the same."

He accosted the infant twice, but of course gained no response, only a blank infantile stare.

"Alas, alas!" sighed Shelley. "How very reticent these little creatures are!"

Rubber and Gutta Percha.

There are important distinctions between india rubber and gutta percha, and in the majority of purposes for which they are employed one cannot replace the other. While the trees yielding india rubber are well distributed over the tropical parts of the world and may be cultivated with more or less facility, the tree which furnishes gutta percha is to be found only in Borneo, Sumatra and the Malay archipelago generally.

The dealer was busy filling bottles from a hogshead of wine.

"Don't know," answered the dealer. "I haven't labeled it yet."—Argonaut.

The Line of March

A St. Patrick's Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Matthew Golden rearranged the newspapers and periodicals on his counter into their customary order. March issues of the Ladies' Own Periodical confronted him. There on the cover, encircled by a wreath of shamrocks, was Margaret Devlin's beautiful Irish face—blue-black mist of hair, forgetmenot eyes fringed thickly with black lashes, saucy nose and smiling red lips.

The name of the artist was fantastically blurred into the background, yet it was clear enough for Matthew's jealous eyes to decipher "Conners." His hands clinched savagely. He knew Conners by sight—big, hulking, red headed artist from the top floor of the studio building around the corner. He had walked past twice with Margaret Devlin. Once there had been a little thin faced girl with them—some new friend of Margaret's whom Matthew did not know.

Just then the door opened, and he turned to confront Margaret herself, bewitching in fur turban and coat of chinchilla. Her blue eyes did not lift above his firm chin; they rested there while she spoke:

"Good morning. Is the March number of the Ladies' Own Periodical out yet?"

He placed a copy of the desired magazine on the counter before her and turned away that he might not see the look of startled pleasure in her eyes when she beheld her own beauty on the cover.

"I'll take all the copies you have," said Margaret crisply, opening her jingling silver purse. "How much?" Even then her eyes were not lifted above his chin.

"Forty-nine copies at 10 cents—$4.90—thank you." The bell on the cash register clanged noisily as Matthew made change. He laid the coins on the counter. "Shall I send the magazines to you, madam? They are very heavy." His tone was very impersonal.

"If you please," said Miss Devlin haughtily, with one gloved hand on the knob of the door.

The young man who worked for him came back from lunch, the errand boy returned from the familiar number in Seventy-fifth street, and still Matthew worked on relentlessly.

The door opened, and a strange thrill down his spine told Matthew Golden that Margaret had returned. He heard her low pitched voice speaking to the clerk. The latter spoke:

"I see we are all out of the Ladies' Own, Mr. Golden. When will we have some more?"

"I shall not order any more."

The store was empty, and he pushed his chair away impatiently and locked the books into the safe. Then he reached down his hat and went out to dinner.

It was his luck that the only vacant seat in the restaurant should be opposite Margaret's father, Tom Devlin.

Mr. Devlin was as homely as his daughter was beautiful, and his plain features now lighted up into genial friendliness. "Matthew, me dear boy," he said, with just a touch of the brogue, "I'm glad to see ye. What's the matter. Ye haven't been wearing out the doormat at No. 842 this dog's age. I've been looking for ye to come around and have a game at cribbage with me—Maggie's head's so full of wedding clothes." Mr. Devlin attacked his salad, with twinkling eyes busy over the proper mixture of the dressing.

Matthew's heart gave a frightened leap, one or two hard thumps and then apparently went out of business all together.

"When is the wedding?" he heard himself ask carelessly.

"The 17th," returned Mr. Devlin.

"This month?"

"Sure."

"St. Patrick's day, then," murmured Matthew dazedly.

"Like to have ye come, Mat—9 o'clock at St. Francis'. Maggie would have it so, though Conners wanted just to step into the rector and let Father Fraley tie the knot."

Matthew scraped back his chair and waved the proffered dessert aside. "I must be going along. Good night, Mr. Devlin," he said heavily.

"Then ye won't be there on the 17th?" asked Devlin, with a tinge of disappointment in his tone.

"Can't. Sons of St. Patrick parade at 9 on the 17th," said Matthew. "My congratulations to Miss Margaret."

Devlin was speaking to the waiter, and Golden took his hat and went away into the brightly lighted streets. He walked for hours up and down the hard pavements, seeing nothing save a pair of forgetmenot blue eyes and feeling nothing save a tearing pain at his heart.

Back in his little store, now closed to customers, he leaned his head wearily against the desk and thought bitterly of what had led up to the approaching wedding on St. Patrick's day, but a fortnight away.

He and Margaret had been engaged for a year when she suddenly announced that Conners was to use her as a model for a magazine cover design. After that announcement matters moved rapidly. Matthew forbade it. Margaret defied him, and without explanation on either side their troth was broken.

Six weeks had passed since that miserable night, and he had scarcely caught a glimpse of her face, save at a great distance, until that morning when she came into his news store.

Two weeks dragged slowly by, and the morning of St. Patrick's day found Matthew Golden arraying himself in the splendid uniform of the Faithful Sons of St. Patrick. He dwelt wretchedly on the same anniversary a year ago, when Margaret had stood on the curbstone and waved a green and gold flag as he passed by. It had been the happiest day of his life, for that very evening he had asked Margaret to marry him, and she had consented. By contrast today would be the bitterest he would ever know.

He strode down the street, admired by many feminine eyes and quite unconscious of anything except the event that would occur at 9 o'clock. A little past that hour the parade would march down the avenue past the very portals whence Margaret would emerge changed in name forever.

Trumpets blared, drums rattled, fifes rippled as the several bands of music fell into place. There were hoarse commands, the shuffle of countless feet on the pavements; shrill cries from the throngs gathered about, and the parade started.

As they neared St. Francis' granite bulk Matthew's heart almost stood still. He prayed hard that he might be spared the sight of Margaret's wedding party emerging from the church. The uniforms of the men, white and green and gold, with splendid sashes of emerald satin fringed with gold, made a ribbon of color down the broad avenue. Matthew was in the outer column, his face like ashes, his mouth set in a grim line of despair and his feet mechanically moving to the strains of the "Wearin' of the Green."

Then, just before they reached the church, he saw them—saw Conners' red head and a girl's figure beside him, saw them run down the steps and enter a carriage on the cross street and roll away, while Tom Devlin waved a jovial farewell before he turned to watch the paraders.

Matthew's face had turned to watch the bridal pair enter the carriage. When he faced front once more his startled, unbelieving eyes saw Margaret Devlin herself—Margaret in green broadcloth with a great bunch of shamrock at her waist waving a green satin flag at—him!

Tom Devlin and his daughter followed close in the wake of the Faithful Sons of St. Patrick that day. Matthew saw them at the most unexpected corners, always smiling and waving their flags at him. He began to feel like one of the family again and to realize that there was a blunder somewhere—a mistake for which he might be devoutly thankful, for it was evident that Conners had married somebody, and Matthew did not care who it was so long as it was not Margaret Devlin.

When the parade was over Tom and Margaret were on hand to escort Matthew home. He entered the big touring car that sprang from somewhere and found himself between Margaret and her father. The girl's cheeks were flushed, and her blue eyes evaded Matthew's questioning glance.

Once at the familiar house in Seventy-fifth street Tom Devlin disappeared and left the two together.

"Margaret, dear"—Matthew was beside her instantly—"I've been a jealous fool. Tell me the mystery. Did you marry Conners or what?"

"Of course I married Tom Conners. That's why I let another girl go off with him," mocked Margaret, and then suddenly her blue eyes filled with tears and her head found its place on his broad shoulder. "If you'd had a little more faith in me, Matthew," she said, "you would have been happier yourself and made it easier for me to do a good deed."

"You'll have to explain, dear. I'm all at sea," he pleaded.

"Conners has been engaged to Agnes Lee for a year, and he hasn't had a chance to show what he can do. He needed to get out one successful drawing and then he could have all the orders he wanted. Till then he had to starve, and Agnes had to wait and wait for the home she wanted. You know Agnes is skin and bone and homely, and I'm not. So I went to Conners and suggested the picture you saw on the magazine cover. I wanted to help them, that's all. He sold the drawing, got another and larger order, and when the magazine came out father and I bought up all the copies we could, and they got out a second edition. What do you think of that? Of course Tom Conners is 'fixed' now—they've recognized what he could do. I didn't really want my face on a magazine cover, Mat, but I had to help them out. They love each other just as we do. Father and I got them married and off on their honeymoon, and now, Matthew Golden, were you ever happier than you are this minute?" she asked saucily.

"Yes," replied Matthew solemnly, "I was happier when I looked up and saw you standing on the curbstone waving your flag at me, darling. I shall never forget the change from despair to happiness, and I have one thing to say."

"What is that, Mat?" she asked, with softly luminous eyes near his own.

"That you may forgive me for being a jealous fool and spoiling the sweet deed you were doing and that all my life, when I'm on the line of march and meet troubles and sorrows, I can always look up as I did today and see your sweet face smiling on me; that's all," said Matthew huskily.

Another Kind of Walk.

Ethel did not rush into his arms and cry "Oh, Cuthbert!" as usual. When he was ushered into the drawing room she gave him the frigid eye, and the gas was kept on at full pressure.

"I've been studying pedomancy, Cuthbert," she announced.

"Pedomancy, pet?"

"Divination by the feet," she explained. "Feet that incline to flatness are a sign of meanness, Cuthbert."

Cuthbert looked down at his No. 10 tans and sighed.

"A hurried yet silent walk," she continued, "is indicative of criminal instincts. Your walk is so hurried, so noiseless, Cuthbert."

"You are speaking of only one of my styles of walking, Ethel," he answered brightly. "I have another. I used it this afternoon to walk into a jeweler's shop and buy a $150 engagement ring that I had hoped"—

"Oh, Cuthbert!" she cried, and the next minute the pedomancy expert and a splay footed youth were crowded into one saddlebag chair, and the gas was turned down into a little blue bubble.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Dumas' Wealth and Poverty.

Alexandre Dumas' rise to wealth and luxury was almost as marvelous as that of his most celebrated hero. He built a magnificent chateau, which he named Monte Christo. There he entertained all comers, friend and stranger alike, with more than oriental magnificence and sometimes with oriental mystery. His purse was open to all who sought it, and the day came when he experienced Timon's fate without acquiring Timon's disposition. He could not become a misanthrope, though his fortune disappeared almost as suddenly as it came, and then he learned the ingratitude of men. His last days were passed not in poverty, but in narrow circumstances. He left Paris in the fall of 1870 just as the German army was closing in to besiege it and when France was feeling its deepest woe. To the last he preserved his gayety and youthful spirit. "I had but one napoleon in my pocket when I first came here," he said. "I go away with two, and yet they call me a spendthrift."

Very Devout.

A new parson was presented to a living in a remote agricultural district and was anxious to make himself at home with his flock as soon as possible. He therefore began his pastoral calls at once. Among the first recipients of these attentions was Farmer Jones, whose family the new parson had noticed to be very regular and apparently very devout attendants at church. Farmer Jones was out, but his wife received the parson, when the following dialogue took place: "I am your new rector, Mrs. Jones. I have noticed with great pleasure your regular attendance at church and have lost as little time as possible, you see, in calling and improving our acquaintance." "Yes, sir," replied Mrs. Jones; "we're 'bliged to be reg'lar at church, for if we didn't go Farmer Smith claims that pew, and we're not goin' to give it up for the likes o' him. So my son Peter stands at the door half an hour before service begins to keep 'im out."—Liverpool Mercury.

Big Hats In Colonial Days.

The question of high hats at public places was of some moment, even in colonial days. In 1769 the church at Andover, Mass., put it to vote whether "the parish disapprove of the female sex sitting with their hats on in the meeting house in time of divine service as being indecent." In the town of Abington in 1775 it was voted that it was "an indecent way with the feminine sex to sit with their hats and bonnets on in worshiping God." Still another town voted that it was the "town's mind" that the women should take their bonnets off in meeting and hang them on the pegs.

Too Costly.

King George II. once wished to add the Green park, in London, to his palace grounds, whether the people liked it or not. He inquired of his minister as to the cost.

His lordship, mindful of the general discontent then prevalent, answered: "The cost, sir? Oh, it would be a matter of three crowns!"

The king took the hint. The people kept their park and the sovereign his triple throne.

Merciful.

Mrs. A.—I do love lobsters, but I never have them at home because it seems so inhuman to kill them by putting them in a kettle of boiling water. Mrs. B.—Gracious! I never kill them that way—it would be too horrible. I always put them on in cold water and let them come to a boil.—Boston Transcript.

No Satisfying Her.

"Women are hard to understand."

"Think so?"

"Yes; I told her she carried her age well, and she was offended."

"You don't say!"

"Yes, and then I told her she didn't carry it well, and she wouldn't speak."—Philadelphia Record.

Misnamed.

Wife—I say, do you know the girl in the flat above us won a piano at the charity bazaar lottery yesterday?

Husband—A piano? Great Scott! And that's what they call a charity bazaar!—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Ever Faithful.

"He's always wanting to borrow money from me."

"A fair weather friend merely?"

"Oh, no. He has also borrowed several umbrellas."—Pittsburg Post.

The Revolutionary Character of Insurgency

THE revolutionary character of insurgency is pointed out in the warning sounded by Representative Needham, who says: "Insurgency in its national aspect is rapidly becoming anti-Taft and anti-Protection. When this fact becomes generally known there will be a change in the sentiment of the country regarding it." No sentimentality in the country should induce REPUBLICANS to discredit the administration of Mr. Taft, and the majesty of our highest office should be preserved, else the Socialist element in the United States will take advantage of the situation and the movement will gain considerable impetus through the split in the Grand Old Party. The Insurgents of today are the Populists of some years ago. Who wants to be a Populist?

MAY has been ushered in with all her beauties, and Sonoma Valley with its carpets of green into which are woven the gold of the poppy, the white of the for-get-me-not, the blue of the lupin and a thousand other floral tints is all ready for the nature-lovers, the health-seekers, the vacation idlers, who will soon be among us again in increased numbers. It is a satisfaction to realize that our accommodations are better and bigger than ever before, and those who come to the valley this year will be well taken care of.

MANY improvements are going on in the town and near vicinity and the many pretty homes and substantial business blocks which have been added to Sonoma since last year show increased confidence in the future. With the carrying of the sewer proposition Sonoma will lay the real foundation for future success. Boost it, voters.

Supervisors Appoint Horticultural Commissioner.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors Allen R. Gallaway of Healdsburg was appointed Horticultural Commissioner of Sonoma county. Mr. Gallaway is eminently fitted for the position, being one of the best known and most scientific orchardests in this section of the state. For a number of years he served the county as Horticultural Commissioner and inspector when no salary was attached to the office, but will now receive a small compensation. He will appoint a deputy, who will assist him in his duties.

A Divorce Decree Long Delayed

Ten years ago Mrs. Regina Diebold of Agua Caliente secured a divorce in the Superior Court of this county from George Diebold. Shortly after the divorce was granted Mrs. Diebold's attorney, the late O. O. Weber of Santa Rosa, died very suddenly before having the decree signed by Judge Burnett, who was then Superior Judge. The case was then forgotten and Mrs. Diebold supposed she was a free woman. Fortunately however she did not remarry and no harm came from the oversight. Lately it was made known to her that her freedom had not yet been secured by judicial sanction and an attorney was then engaged to straighten out the matter. The case came before Judge Seawell, one day last week, who attached his signature to the decree which had been pigeon-holded for ten years. The parties to the suit are still residents of Agua Caliente.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

"Uncle Rube."

In order to help defray the expenses of giving the coming Carnival of Nations full advertising not only throughout Sonoma Co. but also in San Francisco, several public-spirited gentlemen are helping the ladies of the Woman's Club in getting up a comedy to be given in Union Hall Saturday evening, May 14th. "Uncle Rube" is a capital drama, full of fun and humor and the house will surely be crowded with those who wish both a jolly evening and to help a good cause.

Remember, the big sum hoped for from the Carnival is all to be spent here at home in beautifying our Plaza.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Before leaving town Mr. Norton appointed Frank Koenig and L. Breitenbach local verification deputies to receive signatures for Mr. Curry, who will win out in this county without a doubt. His strongest competitor will be Alden Anderson, while Hiram Johnson will prove to be a joke.

Peculiar and Painfnl Accident

Elmer, the thirteee-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rambo, met with a painful accident last Sunday evening. The youngster while handling an incandescent electric light bulb essayed to test its strength by squeezing it between the palms of his hands, with the result that it was crushed like an egg shell and his right hand was cut in a dreadful manner. A long cut, which penetrated to the bone and extended over the palmer surface of the hand, was sewed up by Dr. Leix, who took four stitches in the member.

CITY TRUSTEES IN MAY SESSION

Call on Election to Vote Sewer Bonds---L. L. Lewis Addresses Board and Requests Permission to Lay Down Water Pipes---Other Matters.

The City Trustees met in regular monthly session last Wednesday evening, Mayor Cummings and Trustees Dal Poggetto, McDonell, Quartaroli and Wagnon being present. The new City Clerk, H. W. Gottenberg, occupied a seat at the table so long filled by ex-City Clerk Joe B. Small.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and approved the following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

The usual monthly bills were allowed and ordered paid: Sonoma Valley Co., electric light, $42.00; Henry Castagnasso, street sprinkling, $23.05; Joe B. Small, salary, etc., $41.83; Harry Pooler, repairing fire hydrants, $4.50; Jas. C. O'Rourke, services of election board, $24.00; F. Duhring, supplies, $1.65; Jas. C. O'Rourke, storage on street sprinkler, $3.00; L. V. Emparan, water, $15.00; Jas. H. Albertson, salary City Marshal, $15.00; Fairville quarries, crushed rock, $132.00; Mrs. Martha Stearns, interest on City Hall bonds, $200.00.

The bill of County Clerk Wright for $10 for registration affidavits, was laid over.

The most important matter that came up for consideration was the sewer ordinance, which was passed to third reading and publication, all the members voting aye on the proposition. The ordinance among other things authorizes the holding of a special election on Saturday, May 28th, to vote a bond issue of $20,000 to construct a septic tank system of sewerage. The ordinance will be found elsewhere in these columns.

The matter of the franchise granted to the Sonoma Valley company a number of years ago coming up for consideration, the Electric Light Committee, composed of Trustees McDonell and Dal Poggetto, were authorized to make a demand upon the President of the company for 2 per cent of its gross receipts for the year ending October 19, 1909, in compliance with the terms upon which the franchise was granted.

L. L. Lewis, President of the Yulupa Land and Water Company, appeared before the Board on behalf of his company, which expects to enter the town as a competitor of the Sonoma City Water Works Company, owned by two of General Vallejo's daughters, Mrs. L. V. Emparan and Mrs. Harry Cutter. Mr. Lewis stated the object and aims of his water company and notified the Board of his intention of entering the town with his system and requested the co-operation of its members in his undertaking.

It was admitted by the Trustees that Mr. Lewis' water company had a right to lay down its pipes within the incorporated limits of the town without securing a franchise from the city, but it was the sense of the Board that some concession should be made to the city by his company. Reasoning on these lines the Board requested that the city be furnished with free water for street sprinkling and fire purposes.

Mr. Lewis did not think he was legally bound to make these concessions but said he would secure legal advice on the subject. The matter then went over for further discussion at an adjourned meeting to be held Friday evening.

After the transaction of other business of minor importance the Board adjourned.

Mrs. Ellen Cassebohm, for Many Years a Resident of this Valley, Died Monday Morning.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Cassebohm, for many years a resident of Embarcadero, in the southern part of the valley, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Wm. H. Goodman, on Broadway in this place, at 2 o'clock Monday morning after a long illness.

The deceased came to this valley with her parents from Missouri when a young girl. In time she married, but her husband passed away in the seventies, after which she made her home with the Goodman family at Embarcadero and later came to Sonoma when the family located here.

There all of the family were born. They crossed the plains to California with ox teams in 1850 arriving in Sonoma valley and settling on a farm on the Pueblo of Sonoma near the Embarcadero, four miles from the old town of Sonoma.

Mrs. Cassebohm was buried from the Goodman home Tuesday afternoon, the interment being in Mountain Cemetery.

One fortieth part of the whole amount of the principal of said bonds created under the said proposition shall be paid each and every year, at the City Treasury of said City of Sonoma, on a day and date to be hereafter fixed by the legislative branch of said municipality, together with the interest upon all sums unpaid at such dates, provided that the interest on said bonds shall be paid semi-annually, so that there shall be a payment of interest on all sums then unpaid in every half year, one of such semi-annual payments in each year being at the date of the payment of the annual installment of the principal of such indebtedness as aforesaid, and provided further, that said interest shall be evidenced by the proper coupons attached to each bond for each semi-annual payment of interest to become due on such bond.

And it is further ordered that the total indebtedness authorized to be created at said election shall be represented by bonds, payable in the manner aforesaid, and that said bonds shall be issued in such denomination or denominations as the Board of Trustees of said city shall authorize, and that said bonds shall be known as "Municipal Improvement Bonds."

At said special election the polls shall be opened at six o'clock in the morning of the day of such election, and must be kept open until six o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, when the polls shall be closed, except as provided in Section 1164 of the Political Code of the State of California.

Animal Vanity.

In a small town in Jersey there is a corner grocery where you may buy anything from a twenty foot ladder to a pearl necklace. Adhesive plaster, sauerkraut and toilet articles are also sold, and in case of necessity you may get a hair cut or a horse shod in the back yard. Some time since a farmer stopped in the store to get some horse liniment to rub the rheumatism out of a sick cow, and two or three days later he came back with a life sized kick.

"Look here, Abner," he complainingly remarked, "I wish ye would be a leetle might more keerful how ye throw yerself back o' thet counter. T'other day ye give me cologne instead o' hoss liniment, and gosh dast if I didn't put it on thet sick cow afore I found out what it was."

"It didn't hurt her any, did it?" broke in the groceryman.

"Can't say thet it did," answered the farmer, "but ever sence she has had thet sweet smellin' stuff on her she hain't done a derned thing but jes' look at her reflection in ther duck pond an' sigh."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Damascus, a Garden City.

Damascus is a garden city touched by the great desert. Under its roses one feels the sands. Beside its trembling waters one dreams of the trembling mirage. The cry of its muezzins seems to echo from its mosque towers to that most wonderful thing in nature which is "God without man." The breath of the wastes passes among the poplars as that Bedouin boy passed among the merchants when he came and when he went. In Damascus one hears the two voices. And when one looks from the sacred mountain upon that city of dream, cradled among the woods, one sees far off the tawny beginnings of that other magic which looks out from the Bedouin's eyes. And though perhaps with the pilgrims from Samarkand one loves to rest beside the fountains under the hedges of roses, one is aware of the other love, intercourse with which has made Damascus an earthly paradise for them and for you.—Robert Hichens in Century.

Handicapped.

Two old settlers sat smoking in their cabin far away in the backwoods. No woman's hand had ever desecrated that sanctum, and grime reigned supreme and triumphant. The conversation veered around from state politics to cooking.

"Ya-as," said the elder of the two, with a drawl. "I did get one o' them there cookbooks wunst, but I could never do nothin' with it."

"How was that?" inquired the other. "What was the hitch?"

"Waal," was the answer, "every one o' them receits begun in the same way with the same words. Every one o' 'em started off with 'take a clean dish,' and I never got no farther."

And he slowly replaced his old black clay pipe in his mouth and fell to ruminating sadly on the narrow outlook on the world of human beings as displayed by authors of cookery books.

Origin of Kilts.

It will doubtless surprise many Scotchmen to learn that the kilt as at present worn is only a modern fancy costume and is not of Scottish origin at all. The honor of its invention is due to two Englishmen—an army tailor who accompanied General Wade's forces to Scotland in 1719 and Thomas Rawlinson, overseer of some iron works in Glengarry's country. For more than a century previously, indeed, the tartan plaid had been the common garb of the highlanders, but it was all in one piece, wound in folds around the body, leaving the knees bare. Prior to the adoption of the tartan, which probably took place about the close of the fifteenth century, the long, loose saffron colored skirt, the real "garb of old Gaul," was the highland dress.—London Mail.

Gift to the Ugly Man.

The practice of making such gifts appears to have arisen in America and is nearly obsolete. It therefore seems to deserve a note. It goes back to Harvard college (now Harvard university) beyond 1794. In that year William Biglow was the recipient of the jackknife. In 1795 he handed it on to Charles Prentiss, with these lines:

Item: C. P. has my knife
During his natural college life,
That knife which ugliness inherits
And due to his superior merits,
And when from Harvard he shall steer
I order him to leave it here
That 't may from class to class descend
Till time and ugliness shall end.
—Notes and Queries.

Meaning of Cemetery.

It is not correct to say that "cemetery" means the "city of the dead." The word is from the Greek "koimeterion," meaning sleeping place, not the place of the dead. There is nothing in the etymology of the word to warrant us in thinking that it was originally intended to convey the idea that the departed were really dead any more than there is in the old Hebrew term for cemetery, "bethaim," the house of the living.—Exchange.

If a man look sharp and attentively he shall see fortune, for, though she is blind, she is not invisible.—Bacon.
